

I am concerned about the possibility of a handful of companies or less owning all of the reasonably accessible major forms of news and entertainment. It seems to me that this is more than just an industry or economic issue. There is freedom of expression and freedom of the press at stake. For all of us who work in a large super company, freedom of expression has a small office in the basement. If deregulation is supposed to create more competition and better choices just look at the last 8 yrs or so. Has the Microsoft issue been learned from? When money is at stake deep pockets will spend what ever it takes, and if the FCC is out to protect the consumer then it should pay attention to more than money issues and do the right thing and keep our PUBLIC AIRWAYS DIVERSE.
